

Not Alone

Patty Griffin

She sees him laying in the bed alone tonight
The only thing a-touching him is a crack of light
Pieces of her hair are wrapped around and 'round his fingers
And he reaches for her side, for any sign of her that lingers
And she says you are not alone, laying in the light
Put out the fire in your head and lay with me tonight
One of them bullets went straight for the jugular vein
There were people running, a flash of light, then everything changed
Nothing really matters in the end, you know all the worries sever
Don't be afraid for me my friend, one day we all fall down forever
CHORUS
The wedding date was June, just like any other bride
She loved him like no one before and it was good to be alive
But sometimes that can slip away as fast as any fingers through your hands
So you let time forgive the past and go and make some other plans
CHORUS x2
