Bluebird (Remastered 95)

Leon Russell

Yeah, I'm lost in the night The icy wind is howling out your name And desolation lingers like a fog The fire is growing dimmer in the windI'm out in the rain The moon has gone behind the cloud again And I can't stand to live another day 'Cause my bluebird went awayAnd I'm locked in this room with my sorrow No escape, no way to get away And my only connection with tomorrow Is hoping that you might decide not to stay away I'm out on a limb If I could only find sweet love again To live my life this way is too much to bare Can't find my bluebird anywhere, anywhereI'm lost in the night The icy wind is howling out your name And desolation lingers like a fog The fire is growing dimmer with the wind I'm out in the rain The moon has gone behind the cloud again I can't stand to live another day Bluebird, why did you go away? Tell me, bluebird, why did you go away? Little bluebird, why did you go away? Won't you tell me?
