

A Perfect Sonnet

Bright Eyes

Lately I've been wishing I had one desire
Something that would make me never want another
Something that would make it so that nothing matters
All would be clear then But I guess I'll have to settle for a for a few brief moments
And watch it all dissolve into a single second
And try to write it down into a perfect sonnet
Or one foolish line Cause that's all that you'll get
So you'll have to accept
You are here and then you're gone But I believe that lovers should be tied together and Thrown into the ocean in the worst of weather and left there to drown
Left there to drown in their innocence
But as for me I'm coming to the final chapter
I read all of the pages and there's still no answer
Only all that was before I know must soon come after That's the only way it can be So I stand in the sun
And I breathe with my lungs
Trying to spare me the weight of the truth Saying everything you've ever seen was just a mirror
You've spent your whole life sweating in an endless fever
And laying in a bathtub full of freezing water
Wishing you were a ghost But once you knew a girl and you named her "Lover"
Danced with her in kitchens through the greenest summer
But autumn came, she disappeared, you can't remember
Where she said she was going to But you know that she's gone
Cause she left you a song
That you don't want to sing
We're singing I believe that lovers should be chained together
And thrown into a fire with their songs and letters
And left there to burn
Left there to burn in their arrogance But as for me I'm coming to my final failure
I've killed myself with changes trying to make things better
And ended up becoming something other than what I had planned to be All right I believe that lovers should be draped in flowers
And laid entwined together on a bed of clovers
Left there to sleep
Left there to dream of their happiness

Lyrics provided by <https://www.omusic.in/>