

Where The Hawkwind Kills

Daniel Lanois

The suburb walls are closing in
I've looked at you and I've seen you
Through your curtain
With a naked eye from not far
I've shed a tear for you
A flowing fountainFlaming trees
I'm lost in fields of your hairFrom where the hawkwinds kill
And the blood runs thin
I'll go now
Fly I will
From inside the gates of the stripping yard
I can't touch you I can't feel for this thunder town
I want you now while my body is young
My mind is strong away from thunder townFrom where the hawkwind kills and the dam runs deep
In this land of heaven
Not so sweetI turn my back to a godless night
I hear the mighty stranger over thunder hill
From where the hawkwinds kill
And the blood runs thin
I'll go now
Fly I willOver the mountain I must go
To see the valley below
Thunder town
