

The Call

Matt Kennon

Today was gonna be the day, he'd already wrote the note he parked that chevrolet at the end that dead end road had his finger on the trigger, just about to end everything he was taking one last long breath when he heard his cell phone ring and his best friend said man where you been?
we're heading down to the lake this weekend you better not miss it cause buddy i swear it wont be the same if you aint there and i told that girl that you like so much that you were coming along and her eyes lit up I better let you go man i really hope i didnt catch you in the middle of anything He said you kinda did but i dont mind at all I'm glad you called.
In another town down the road, in the back seat of a car two 18 year olds had let a kiss go to far He said how we gonna have this child when were both headed off to school he convinced her late one night theres only one thing to do She was scared to death in that waiting room when the nurse asked how far along are you she said 5 weeks and just about then her phone lit up and his call came in He said baby i was wrong about everything i already bought you a dimond ring were gonna start a life would you be my wife boy or girl pink or blue yeah either way all she could say as she felt those tear drops fall i'm so glad you called If someone you know is weighing on your mind, and needs a friend on the other end of the line dont hesitate what you say may seem so small but who knows they might be glad you called So make the call
