

Fountain of Innocence

Cathedral

(Jennings/Dorrian) Fountain of youth, life spirit flows into a well of truths, of cold and dim repose.
I craved to be as high as the pillowy clouds, to walk amongst the tall, who used to look back down and frown. (Chorus:)
Now here I stand by the wasteland, where our dreams began.
From these once golden fields our curiosity ran... I chased the sugar claw through temptation's door,
the bitterness I found... sweetness I taste no more
From the play ground to the slayground,
the sombre middle ground absorbs the emptiness. (Chorus 2:)
Look back across the marble sea of discovery,
a fountain of innocent flows in juvenescence.
I'm resident in corridors of sentiment.
I face the wall - discovery terminal,
but there's no more false truths I wish to discover,
and I am physically unable, to tread back down those corridors.
Fountain of youth, oh how I bathed in your innocence,
and now in cold repose, I must face the bitter truth...
