

Stained Glass

Madison Beer

Lately, I'm countin' the minutes that I've got left
And lately, I'm countin' the words that I haven't said
'Cause you will never know what I've been through And you should be a little more gentle
But maybe I need to start taking my own advice
'Cause my heart's so heavy, it's ready to fall out twice
'Cause you will never know what I've been through So you should be a little more gentle with me My skin is made of glass, but apparently it's stained
'Cause you notice all the cracks, but can't look inside my pain
And if you throw another stone
Then I'd stay far away, far away
I just might break
My life is just a fadin' memory of one I can't have
And everythin' 'round me is starting to fade into black, mmm
But black and white is so much better
I'm learning how to hide my colors
You should've been a little more gentle with me My skin is made of glass, but apparently it's stained
'Cause you notice all the cracks, but can't look inside my pain
And if you throw another stone
Then I'd stay far away, far away
I just might break Break
Break, mmm
Hey, might break
Might break, mmm
My skin is made of glass, but apparently it's stained
'Cause you notice all the cracks, but can't look inside my pain
And if you throw another stone
Then I'd stay far away, far away
I just might break

Lyrics provided by <https://www.omusic.in/>