

Room 138

Asking Alexandria

On my back, breathing heavy, staring at the light
Praying this isn't the end, but pretty sure it might be
On my back, got my heart beating out of my chest
I never thought, I can't believe that I'd go out like this So these are the walls that have to hold this moment

I never expected to be here again
My vision is blurring as the light starts to fade
Please pull me out of this
My ribs are breaking, I swear, I'm only 23
Crawling, searching for a lifeline I just can't reach
Somebody hear me, someone open up the door
Get me up off of this floor and stop the shaking, the shaking
The blood is boiling in my veins
Oh God, the pain! It's unrelenting
I'm ready for the end

If it means that all of this will end
So these are the walls that have to hold this moment

I never expected to be here again
My vision is blurring as the light starts to fade
Please pull me out of this
Through the haze I saw a face, a second chance
Another life to live
How did you forgive me?
Held my head against your chest
Told me everything's alright, don't be afraid
Close your eyes and rest
Through the haze I saw a face, a second chance
Another life to live
How did you forgive me?
Held my head against your chest
Told me everything's alright, don't be afraid
So these are the walls that have to hold this moment
I never expected to be here again
My vision is blurring as the light starts to fade
Please pull me out of this
Please pull me out of this
Please pull me out of this
