

Country Ain't Never Been Pretty

Cam

Her high heels on the red carpet her perfect hair blowing in the wind with her designer jeans and fake eyelashes crooning "thanks ya'll" to the crowd between the flasheshe may be singing 'bout the country, puttin' out the hits but those boots sure never stepped in horseshit so thank god she lives in the city
'cause country aint never been prettyhear the rooster crow at the crack of dawn you already been at it for hours you're thankful there's no cameras 'cause you make an awful face the first sit in a cold tractor seat just can't be done with grace instead of hairspray and curls you got hay and dirt slammed your unpainted nails into a barn door but its alright to look kinda shitty 'cause country aint never been prettyas simply as it seems who needs brand-name jeans your man's hands gonna cover the label anywherecountry aint never been pretty and thats alright cause if your heads on straight your hair will be fine you might not get it at first, but you'll come around
And see, your legs look great with both feet on the ground
All right
Please stop me if you get it already Country ain't never been pretty
You can spend eight hours at the gym every day
But then who would bale the hay?
You can iron your shirt and polish your boots
But then you may as well go put on a suitThe glitter and glamor, the fortune and fame
The sugar-free soy vanilla lattes Leave all that to the folks in the city Cause country ain't never been prettyIt's easier than you think Just buy a round of drinks Beer goggles are cheaper than Gucci glasses anyway Whoo!Country ain't never been pretty, and that's alright
Cause if your head's on straight, your hair will be fine
You might not get it at first, but you'll come around
And see, your legs look great with both feet on the ground
All right
Please stop me if you get it already
If you've heard anything I've said in this ditty I'll say it plain; I'm not trying to be witty

Country ain't never been pretty
